HISTORY

The Diplomatic Archives opened on April 15, 1971 as part of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs with the purpose of preserving, managing and compiling diplomatic documents and records of historical value from the mid-19th century to the early period of the 1980s. The Archives has also made these documents available for the public use.

In July 1988, an Annex was built to house an exhibition room and a repository. This Annex was donated by the Yoshida Shigeru(*) International Foundation.

ACTIVITIES

1. Providing Public Access to Historical Documents

The Diplomatic Archives makes its documents available for the use of the public under the relevant rules of the Ministry. In addition, the Archives addresses inquiries from the general public, including academic researchers, about diplomatic records as well as the diplomatic history of Japan.

2. Exhibition

The Annex has an Exhibition Room open to the public. The permanent exhibition displays its diplomatic collections, including major treaties, letters from sovereigns and notes exchanged, from the mid-19th century to the end of World War II. This exhibition room also has on display personal articles of the late Prime Minister Yoshida Shigeru and related documents. Special exhibitions are also held on specified themes several times a year.

3. Publication of Documents on Japanese Foreign Policy (Nihon-gaiho-bunsho)

The diplomatic Archives has published a series of Documents on Japanese Foreign Policy, arranged chronologically and by subject, compiling historical records held by the Ministry. First published in 1936, the series contains 224 volumes that cover the Meiji, Taisho, and pre-war Showa period. The compilation of the post-war Showa period is presently underway. A compilation of diplomatic documents such as Foreign Relations of the United States and Documents on British Policy Overseas (Postwar period) is regarded as national projects by various countries.

4. Providing Digital Images of Documents to Japan Center for Asian Historical Records (JACAR)

JACAR provides the general public with access to images of official documents of governmental institutions through the Internet. The Diplomatic Archives has offered digital images of pre-war diplomatic records (34,300 files) and treaties (550) to JACAR (https://www.jacar.go.jp). The Diplomatic Archives is also continuing to support JACAR by supplying digital images of post-war diplomatic documents.
1. Records of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Foreign Ministry records make up the largest portion of the Diplomatic Archives' documents. They consist of telegrams and official letters with overseas missions of pre-war period since the establishment of the Foreign Ministry as well as historical post-war documents until the end of 1980s. The collection contains about 107,000 files (Pre-war: 48,000 and Post-war: 59,000) as of March 2021.

2. Diplomatic Materials of the Tokugawa Shogunate (Tsushin-zenran and Zoku-tsushin-zenran)
Tsushin-zenran and Zoku-tsushin-zenran are collections of diplomatic documents that are vital in understanding foreign policy of the Tokugawa shogunate during the last days of its reign in Japan. The 320-volumes Tsushin-zenran chronicles diplomatic documentation from 1859 to 1860. The succeeding Zoku-tsushin-zenran is a compilation of documents from 1861 to 1868, edited and classified by the Foreign Ministry into categories such as friendship and commerce. At present, 1,784 volumes remain in existence. The two sets of documents were designated as Important Cultural Property by the Government.

3. Treaties
The Diplomatic Archives preserves some 900 treaties and conventions that were signed from the mid 19th century to post-World War II period. The treaties cover establishment of diplomatic relations, trade, political and financial affairs, and many other issues. They include bilateral treaties such as the 1858 treaty of Amity and Commerce with the U.S., the 1871 Treaty of Tientsin with China, the 1875 treaty for the exchange of Sakhalin for the Kurile islands with Russia, the 1895 Treaty of Peace with China and the 1905 Treaty of Peace with Russia as well as multilateral treaties such as the 1919 Versailles Peace Treaty.

4. Letters and Messages from Various Heads of States
In addition to treaties, the Archives has in its collection some 1,100 letters and messages from various heads of states dated between the mid-19th century and the end of World War II. They include the 1861 letter from U.S. President Abraham Lincoln to the 14th Tokugawa Shogun Iemochi announcing the return of U.S. diplomatic representative in Japan Townsend Harris and the 1863 personal message from Napoleon of France to the Tokugawa Shogun on the appointment of a new diplomatic representative in Japan.

5. Articles and Documents of the late Prime Minister Yoshida Shigeru
The Archives also has in its possession 320 personal articles, letters, photographs, and other documents belonging to the late Yoshida Shigeru, donated by the Yoshida Shigeru International Foundation.
