

DIPLOMACY

Vol.88,Nov./Dec. 2024

Contents of Features

- 80 India's Strategic Autonomy under the Modi Administration
As India pursues "multi-directional diplomacy" amidst economic growth, how will it position itself as a leader of the Global South within an expanded BRICS?
Masanori Kondo (International Christian University)
- 86 Brazil's Cautious Stance Toward an Expanded BRICS
Brazil opposed the inclusion of authoritarian Venezuela as a BRICS partner nation. What is behind President Lula's shift in diplomatic strategy?
Hidetake Miyamoto (Nikkei)
- 92 Polarization or Multipolarity? Malaysia's BRICS Strategy
Malaysia, with its impressive economic growth, seeks a unique position in the world. Joining BRICS is a strategy toward diversifying its economy.
Ayame Suzuki (Rikkyo University)
- 98 Foreign Policy Challenges for the Ishiba Administration: Reasserting the significance of Alliances in Trump 2.0
The Ishiba Administration must adequately prepare for the second term of the Trump administration. The Ishiba government should continue the Abe-Kishida approach, promoting a "Free and Open Indo-Pacific" to enhance summit diplomacy.
Keiko Izuka (Yomiuri Shimbun)
- 104 Wisdom and Rationality in the Nuclear Debate: The Japan Confederation of A- and H-Bomb Sufferers Organizations' (Nihon Hidankyo) Nobel Peace Prize
Nobumasa Akiyama (Hitotsubashi University)
- 106 Israel's Multi-Front Operations Strategy
Following ground operations in Gaza, Israel has launched a similar strategy in Lebanon. What drives Israel's multi-front operations. What might unfold under the Trump administration?
Toshiya Tsujita (Osaka University)
- 112 Hezbollah and the "Axis of Resistance" at a Crossroads
The supreme leader of Hezbollah, Hassan Nasrallah, who had led the group for over 30 years, was killed. What were the policy mistakes he made?
Kota Suechika (Ritsumeikan University)
- 118 The Collapse of German Coalition Government: Worsening Structural Crisis
Germany's economic dependence on China has led to downturns. Divergent positions on economic policy among coalition parties culminated in a split over fiscal balance policies, leading to the collapse of the Scholz government.
Norihide Miyoshi (Journalist)
- 122 What should Japan's diplomatic strategy toward Central Asia be?
Japan must leverage its geopolitical importance to foster strong ties with Central Asia through "creative middle power diplomacy."
Tomohiko Uyama (Hokkaido University)
- 128 Latin America's Frustration with Authoritarian Venezuela
Venezuelan President Maduro has suppressed opposition and secured a controversial third term. As political turmoil grows, neighboring countries worry about the trajectory of authoritarianism.
Hiroyuki Urabe (Dokkyo University)
- 134 Sudan's Civil War: A Grave Humanitarian Crisis
Koji Sakane (Former Chief Representative of the JICA Sudan Office)
- 140 Thirty Years After the Genocide: The Future of Rwanda's "Miracle"
Nobuyoshi Kai (Takushoku University)

Special Feature :

Facing “Trump's America”

6 Trump's Re-election and the Dysfunction of Party Politics

In recent years, U.S. society has grown increasingly polarized, leading to tight electoral margins and intensified divisions. It's essential to understand these long-term political trends in the U.S. and respond accordingly.

Satoshi Machidori (Kyoto University)

14 Shifts in Alliances and a Fluid International Order

The second Trump administration is expected to diverge from the traditional course of U.S. diplomacy. What lies ahead for the international order and alliances long valued by Western nations? How should we respond?

Ryo Sahashi (The University of Tokyo) Michito Tsuruoka (Keio University) Tsuneo Watanabe (The Sasakawa Peace Foundation) Keiko Izuka (TheYomiuri Shimbun)

26 Alliances and Tariffs: Two Axes of U.S.-Japan Relations

Factional divides within the Trump administration center on China policy. The outcomes of these debates will have significant implications for allied nations.

Zack Cooper (American Enterprise Institute)

32 Key Figures in the New U.S. Administration

What do Trump's newly announced cabinet appointments signify? An analysis of leadership trends in the next administration.

Ryota Yoshimura (Sumitomo Corporation of America)

The Not-So-Landslide Presidential Election: What Decided the Outcome?

40 Election data reveals narrow margins but strong Trump performance in swing states. Amid widening societal divisions, Trump's strategy of "consolidating support through division" proved effective.

Kazuhiro Maeshima (Sophia University)

46 The Presidential Election and the "Information Warfare"

The 2024 U.S. presidential election saw unprecedented levels of influence operations. This article analyzes the actors behind these operations and their methods.

Maiko Ichihara (Hitotsubashi University)

52 Escalation of U.S.-China Decoupling

A second Trump administration is likely to continue its hardline approach toward China, while China is expected to respond with retaliatory measures and efforts to achieve supply chain independence. How should Japan navigate this situation?

Liy McElwee (CSIS)

58 How to Sustain Japan-U.S.-South Korea Security Cooperation

Trilateral cooperation was institutionalized during the Biden Administration. Under Trump 2.0, what strategies should be adopted to sustain and strengthen this framework?

Yasuyo Sakata (Kanda University of International Studies)

64 "Trumponomics 2.0": Hopes and Fears

Trump's economic policies—tax cuts, deregulation, high tariffs, and strict immigration controls—will have significant implications for the U.S. and Japan.

Makoto Ono (Mizuho Research & Technologies)

FOCUS The Dynamics of BRICS Expansion

70 Approaching the Expanded BRICS: Expectations for Japan as a Balancer

With BRICS now expanded to nine members, many regional and developing nations welcome the competition between the West and China-Russia. Can Japan understand these countries' realities and act as a balancer?

Shin Kawashima (The University of Tokyo)

74 Russia's "Global Majority" Strategy

Russia identifies non-Western countries as the "global majority" and seeks cohesion centered on BRICS. This article examines the worldview presented by Putin at the Valdai Discussion Club.

Taisuke Abiru (The Sasakawa Peace Foundation)