From Hara to Count Inouye.
Paris, 6 July 1887.

Have been negotiating about judges with French Government on the basis of 10, 15 and 10, according to your instructions, and had good prospects of success. But news from Berlin leads me to suppose that the number granted to United States may have been changed. If it is true basis becomes modified. I do not venture to continue negotiations without further instructions from you.

Memorandum

Having, during the month of June, visited His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar, brother in law of the Emperor of Germany, the undersigned took an opportunity of entering on the subject of the wishes of the Japanese Government regarding the revision of the treaties and tried to convince His Royal Highness that it was in the interest of Germany to support and protect this endeavour of the Japanese Government, for this would increase the influence and popularity of Germany in Japan and would open to German commercial interests new fields of enterprise and profit.

H. R. H. was greatly interested and deplored the want of interest and understanding, which prevailed Majesty's Minister, to Kissingen with the view of seizing, if possible, an opportunity of speaking to Prince Bismarck. On arrival, he proceeded at once to the lodging of the prince, but found that he was ill and received nobody. He, however, thanks to the message of the Grand Duke, succeeded in seeing Count Herbert Bismarck, the son of the Chancellor.

Thinking, however, that a favorable opportunity would occur later, he, on the first visit, made no special allusion to the question of Japanese relations.

During a stay of some weeks, it proved utterly impossible to approach the Prince Bismarck. He kept everything away from him that might have interfered with him cure and only saw persons of whom he was quite certain that they had no business. Under these circumstances, the undersigned thought it better to try and secure an interview with his son, namely Count Herbert Bismarck, and to attempt, through him, to communicate with the father.

Having, on the 24th, succeeded in obtaining an in Germany regarding Eastern Asia, and said that the only person who could take a powerful initiative in this matter would be Prince Bismarck and that it would be desirable that the undersigned should see and try to convince him of the necessity of taking some prominent action in regard to securing the good will of Japan in the interest of developing German trade and, at the same time, assisting Japan to obtain those rights to which it was fully entitled by the remarkable progress it had made.

I replied that it was very difficult to approach Prince Bismarck who was so much burdened with work. The Grand Duke, however, said that the best plan would be to go to the watering place of Kissingen, where it might be easier to see him, and that, in order to have a pretext for calling on him, he (the Grand Duke) would charge me with his compliments to the Prince Bismarck; this would perhaps give me an opportunity of speaking to him and, at the same time, serve as an introduction.

Consequently, in the beginning of August, the undersigned was sent by Mr. Aoki, His Imperial interview with the same, I proceeded gradually to explain to him the motives of my visit. I commenced by saying that he must be aware how the Government of Japan had now, for a number of years, been actively engaged in promoting the civilization at home, how an entire change had been operated in all branches of administration, how the whole political aspect had become another and the people of Japan were now fully entitled to be treated in a manner in conformity to the progress they had achieved. This was the object of the negotiations, which were now going on for the revision of the treaties, of which he would have heard. Japan now had well understood the important position which Germany had obtained in Europe and its desire was to be placed on special and particular good relations of friendship with Germany and it hoped that Germany would be the first government to understand the situation of Japan and would exert itself, in the interest of the Japanese wishes, by using its influence with the other governments for a favorable action in regard to the propositions of Japan for the revision of the treaties. The proposition were indeed very reasonable and, although the public opinion in Japan was for going much farther, the government had only put forward such demands as were absolutely necessary and justifiable. But, if Germany consented to extend its friendship in this manner to Japan and promote, by its powerful influence, the wishes of the Japanese Government, Germany could count on the gratitude of Japan in every respect and that the German commercial interests would, under these circumstances, be duly favored and promoted, was evident, I added, as a personal observation, that there was much prospect of promoting German commercial interests in Japan, if only the right policy was adopted of securing the good will and confidence of the Japanese Government and nation. I concluded by saying that he might be so kind as to speak to his father and ask him to be so good as to take a special interest in this question.

Count Herbert, who had listened with great interest, now proceeded to say in reply that he was had never been the intention that I should speak on the questions of detail; these would naturally be treated, in the usual manner, in Berlin by the competent parties, but it was only a confidential step to ask Prince Bismarck to take a special and personal interest by supporting the wishes of Japan and that it might be pleasing to him to know that Japan had fully appreciated the tokens of interests Germany had lately given by the visit of the Prince Henry, the erection of a legation (by promoting Mr. von Eisendrucker to be Envoy Extraordinary) etc.

Count Herbert Bismarck replied that, so far, there could be no necessity to appeal directly to his father, for the relations with Japan were good, the position and the relations of the Minister Mr. Aoki would make it not difficult to him to obtain, by the usual official negotiation, a favorable result for Japan. He repeated by saying that the great esteem and sympathy, the German statesmen had for Mr. Aoki, were such that, under the present circumstances, he should be quite able to treat the very happy to hear personally the friendly dispositions of the Japanese Government towards Germany, but that, as my statements contained only general observations, he could only reply in the same manner. He could generally say that the disposition of the German Government was very friendly, but that it would be a question of specifying what were the actual and positive wishes of Japan. This could not be done in this manner, but should go through the usual official channel, the Foreign Office. He could not engage to report our conversation to his father, because there would be no use in speaking to him on generalities and that, in order to inform him of the details, he would have to order up the official documents from Berlin which was impracticable. But he could only recommend that Mr. Aoki, who was so well liked by the German authorities, should confidentially treat this question with Prince Hohenlohe who now represented Prince Bismarck in all questions of foreign policy, during the time Prince Bismarck was enjoying his leave of absence. I explained that it matter with them and that he thought it better, at present, not to trouble his father with the question, as he was on leave and only living for the restoration of his health.

The undersigned, having again explained that this conversation had never been intended to be on business and its details, but merely an attempt to obtain the special good will and interest of his father, concluded by asking that it should be treated quite confidentially, which the Count willingly promised.

My conclusive impressions were:

- 1) Count Hebert Bismarck is instructed to keep all business affairs away from his father during his stay in Kissingen.
- 2) that if anything is to be obtained from Prince Bismarck, the negotiator must be prepared to offer certain and definite advantages; generalities and declarations of good will are of no avail and he would not take the trouble to occupy himself personally with the affair. He would probably only do so if he saw some considerable advantage to be derived for (from?) Japan.

Memorandum.

The Imperial Government, in putting before the Treaty Powers their propositions for a Revision of the existing treaties, is fully confident in the friendly dispositions of the latter and takes care to declare that only such modifications have found their way into the drafts as have been proved by experience to be necessary and can be justly claimed with due regard to the improvements and reforms effected in the political system and advancement in the state of national civilization.

The Imperial Government, fully disposed to promote in the mutual interest of Japan and the Treaty Powers the Commercial Relations between the respective countries, would not fail to show their good will by a voluntary and spontaneous opening of ports and new fields for commercial enterprise, in case the foreign powers would give proofs of their friendly and encouraging disposition. It must be also declared that the Government is determined to keep only within the narrowest limits and to abstain from any suggestion which have not been proved an indispensable necessity by continued experience.

In the first place, there presents itself to the attention of the Government the necessity of introducing certain reforms into the system of Consular jurisdiction. It is however not the object of the Government to open the question whether this system of law, as it has been exercised hitherto in Japan, is altogether in conformity with the tenor of the Treaties or has the support of legal theory.

On the contrary, the Imperial Government is ready to admit the fact that although the fountain from which Consular jurisdiction takes its origin can only be the letter of the Treaties, the practical execution may be extended by custom and observation.

Thus the Government, far from wishing to raise objections against Consular jurisdiction on the point of principle or contriving obstacles to its actual positive form, have only the desire to fix justly and equitably the limits of its judicial functions, in order to place it in harmony with the requirements of internal police and the administrative measures of the Government when required by the gradually developing progress in Empire.

It must be admitted by every foreign Government that there can be no doubt that, if the existence of many co-ordinated different courts of justice must be already accompanied by considerable evils, the fact of there existing in one and the same country an accumulation of different administrative authorities, invested with equal privileges for police and local government, is altogether inconsistent with the principles and requirements of the State in the modern sense. For, administration must be a living and active uniform political power having for its object the realization of fixed general national interests.

Administrative action, as well as the determination of what is good for the national interests, can only be exercised and formed by an uniform and undevided power, for otherwise its action would become contradictory and ineffectual when hampered at every step by a decision in the powers who direct and the fettering of the executive organs.

If the evils attending this state of affairs are already serious when the devision of power is confined to two or three parties, how detrimental must it become to public interests when a greater number of equally privileged persons have a voice in the matter! The embarrassments and the difficulties of government must become altogether insupportable when its administrative measures are dependent on the previous consent not of one but of ten or twelve foreign Representatives. It has been proved by experience that the Regulations of the Imperial Government in administrative questions have remained unexecuted in numerous instances, either because the respective Representatives had withheld their consent or because the respective Consular authorities were unwilling to render assistance for the purpose of enforcing them.

The infallible consequence of complications of this kind has been a state of lawlessness and serious injury to important, in some instances, even vital interests of the Empire.

The Imperial Government is however convinced that such a condition of weakness and paralysis can neither be conform (conforming?) to the wishes of the friendly powers, nor necessarily connected with the system of consular jurisdiction.

Consular jurisdiction has developed itself centuries ago under circumstances were (where?) the ends of government were construed to be jurisdiction in the real sense, namely simply judicial functions; the idea of an extended and organized administration, according to the modern conception of this task, did not exist. Under these circumstances, there was no reason not to grant to the consuls a certain power of police over their countrymen and thus the consular jurisdiction proper was practically extended in this respect.

But, with modern requirements of administration, the consular jurisdiction is altogether incompatible as has been shown above. As, in Europe, the same has vanished by the development of the system of modern administration, it will inevitably, in Japan, be reduced to its original sphere, the administration of justice alone, in proportion to the perfectibility of the internal administration in the Japanese Empire, or otherwise the nation would be excluded from the free enjoyment of a refined and comprehensive administration in the modern sense.

The order, solidity and unity of administration is not only in the interest of every state, but in that of every nation which carries on relations of friendship and commerce with it; it is evident that the administration has a tendency to promote and develop the productive and civilized elements in a nation and that commerce with uncivilized nations has but few and transitory advantages.

It is therefore, if well understood, fully in the interest of the foreign governments to lend a considerate hand to the perfection of an uniform and practical administration in the Japanese Empire.

It is a well known fact that the Imperial Government has occupied itself for years with the task of introducing into Japan an uniform and effectual form of administration, based on the model of western powers, and the execution of this task, which has become to her a sacred duty, has been continued without relaxation in the face of many difficulties and has been guided by the desire to bring herewith the nation in closer relation with the Western powers. The Imperial Government feels therefore bound to maintain that, in the mutual interest, the grant of a necessary independence in administration is one of the principal objects to be obtained in the revision of the treaties.

Its views in this respect are the following:

The foreign consular jurisdiction remains unaltered, within the limits of its judicial functions, and may continue, therefore, to act in its present form until it is rendered superfluous by a moral and formal reorganization of the judicial powers according to Western ideas both formally and materially. On the other hand, the Imperial Government shall in future enjoy the right to issue freely administrative Laws, Ordinances and Regulations, especially within the department of police in the farther sense, and have the right to execute the same.

The Imperial Government would therefore propose :

1. That such regulations, when published in a form hereafter to be determined, shall be legally binding on the foreign Residents and Consular Authorities without, however, prejudicing the extraterritorial privileges of the accredited Representatives.
2. That its police and other executive organs shall have the right lawfully to prevent contraventions against such regulations on the part of foreign Residents.
3. That contraventions of this kind may be, within a certain limit, tried and decided by the Japanese authorities, inclusive of the right of executing the sentence.

In this manner, the person and property of the foreign Residents would remain, in all legal cases, under the protection of their respective Consulates, Consular jurisdiction would remain fully unalienated, putting an end at the same time to a state of affairs, which not only trespasses on it (the?) essential rights as a government but has wronged unjustly manifold interests and repeatedly placed in jeopardy the good understanding on both sides. Moreover, the desire of the Japanese Government is directed towards a reform of existing Customs tariff.

The Tariff now in existence dates about thirteen years ago and is, in fact, not only in itself without principle but has proved, in practice, altogether injurious for its (it?) affords no encouragement to the industrial progress of Japan, causes a continued disproportion between imports and exports and, therefore, an [altogether disproportionate exit of gold and silver coins and, finally, has given no assistance to the growing fiscal necessities of the state.

But notwithstanding this, the Imperial Government is far from being inclined to introduce a protective system of the kind existing in many excepting in administrative questions where the Japanese authorities would be competent within certain limits.

The Imperial Government would however declare, in order to remove apprehensions that may be conceived in respect to the introduction of an innovation of this kind, that it would consider it as its moral duty to adopt itself, as far as ever practicable, to the experienced models of the West, as has in fact been generally the case in respect to the reforms hitherto introduced in legislation, and the Government would moreover not be disinclined to create, for the purpose of the exercise of administrative justice, special Administrative Courts with the consultative cooperation of proper professional foreign assistance. In the same manner, the police executive, the prevention and prosecution, as well as the carrying out of sentences, would be regulated according to the custom of Western nations.

The Imperial Government feels convinced that, by these modifications, the justifiable rights of other countries or to regulate the Tariff by autonomical decision.

Its intensions are limited, on the contrary, to obtain in a conventional form a moderate increase of the import duties in order to insure an augmentation of their financial resources. Consequently the Imperial Government desires to contract a conventional tariff on the basis of the drafts submitted, containing the majority of the articles of import, and to be allowed to fix the duty of the remaining articles, which amount altogether to about 20% of the Imports, within a limit not exceeding 30% advalorem. This proposition, which arises principally from a desire of bringing about simplification of the Tariff negotiations, might, in case the Treaty powers attach value to a modification and showed their friendly disposition in other respects, be subjected to another form of compilation.

The Imperial Government must moreover earnestly desire that, within the limits determined above, it should have the right of making its own Regulations respecting the Commerce and navigation, inclusive the harbour and pilots regulations.

The Imperial Government will, according to the good intentions above stated, not fail in its own interest to adopt also, in the composition of these Regulations, those Rules and principles which are universally adopted as customary and equitable among commercial nations in general.

Berlin, 2 February 1881.

Sir,
According to the instructions received from His Majesty's Minister Mr. Aoki and with reference to his despatch No. 2 of the 25th January, I have the honor to report to Your Excellency further details of the verbal communication I received from the German Foreign Office on the 22nd instant relative parts. But the explanations given by Mr. Aoki and the study of his confidential memorandum had done much to remove this impression with them. It was now their object to overcome the objections of the other Powers by adopting a friendly initiative in proposing a fair and acceptable basis for the future negotiations in Japan.

The policy of the German Government was now, as it had ever been before, one of the greatest consideration for the desire of Japan and they were quite willing to assist in promoting a good understanding on the pending question with the other powers. Germany could however not, if it had been so inclined, go to the extent of accepting the Japanese drafts altogether. What was now important for Japan was that the revision of the Treaties should not fall to the ground by the rejection of the Drafts by all the Treaty Powers, but that by the friendly action of Germany a new basis for the negotiations should be arrived at.

The chances of the German intervention also depended very much thereon that the action of

to the question of the revision of the Treaties, Mr. Aoki had instructed me to inform Mr. von Kusserow, the Councillor specially charged with this question, that in consequence of the passive attitude which Germany seems disposed to take and its evident desire of following the action of the other Treaty Powers, he would now have to await first further information from his colleagues in London and Paris before continuing with him the conversation of the question.

Mr. von Kusserow replied that there was evidently some misconception on Mr. Aoki's part regarding the intentions of the German Government, for the same had already at the request of Mr. Aoki commenced its friendly action. It had even gone so far as to submit to the other governments definite proposals for the revision of the Treaties. He added that the German Government had received from the other Governments communications unanimously showing their disinclination to negotiate on the basis of the Japanese proposals which the German Government also found to contain objectionable the Japanese Representatives in London and Paris should not be too active for they would by too much activity perhaps induce the governments of Great Britain and France to a perhaps contrary action which might be an obstacle to the adoption of the German proposals, but if they remained for some time in a reserved attitude there was a probability of the German action being successful.

Mr. von Kusserow promised to give Mr. Aoki due notice when the answer was received from the other powers and furthermore requested that his name and the facts related above should be kept quite confidential as he was not specially authorized to make this communication to me.

This is the substance of our conversation of which I took a short note under his dictation which I have verbally copied into the memorandum forwarded by Mr. Aoki to your Excellency in his despatch No. 2 of the 25 January.

Sir,
With reference to Mr. Aoki's Despatch No. 2 of the 25th January and my "confidential" of the 2nd February, I have now the honor to report that, at a subsequent interview at the Foreign Office, the statement which Mr. Kusserow had made to me on the 22nd January and which Mr. Aoki had reported in his Despatch No. 2 of the 25th January, was declared to be incorrect and replaced by Mr. Kusserow by a fresh communication which I have the honor to enclose herewith for Your Excellency's information.

Your Excellency will not fail to observe that the

of a confidential communication of the Imperial German Foreign Department to Baron von Siebold to replace the statement made to the same on the 22nd January 1881.

Mr. Aoki had endeavoured to remove, with the Imperial German Government, the unfavorable impression caused to the Treaty Powers by the positions of the Japanese Government. He had expressed the hope that the Imperial Government would now, as it had done before, give evidence of its friendship for Japan by the adoption of a friendly initiative with the other Treaty Powers. There is reason to believe now that this wish has been carried out and, as all the Treaty Powers found that the Japanese propositions were unsuitable to serve as a basis for future negotiation, the German Government had consequently taken steps in order to arrive at an understanding with the other Powers for another basis and to promote, in any case, with the latter a disposition for future joint negotiation.

of a conversation held by the undersigned with Mr. von Kusserow of the Imperial German Foreign Office on the 19th instant.

'Having inquired whether Mr. Kusserow could give me any further information on the subject of the former communications regarding the Revision question, he answered that no decision had been arrived at yet, but that the German Government were continuing their friendly offices to bring about an understanding and had reason to hope that they would succeed in finding, with the other powers, a fair basis for further negotiations in Japan. Most of the foreign governments had replied, inclusive same differs from the former memorandum very materially, but agrees with the general facts reported by me in my confidential despatch of the 2 February.

I may add that Mr. Kusserow also confidentially informed me that the German Government had received from several of the Treaty Powers an answer promising a definite reply after due consideration of the German proposals, but that one power (Great Britain) had given notice that they were themselves engaged upon the preparation of a memorandum on the Japanese proposals.

I have the honor to be of Great Britain, but some further correspondence was going on regarding certain details were (where?) further explanations were required. It was however to be desired that the Japanese Government would not now by a change of their proposition (of treating in Tokio) overthrow the friendly endeavours of the German Government which was trying to promote the negotiation in Tokio and felt convinced that the Revision could only properly be conducted there.

From Aoki to Inouye.

Nagaoka's report incorrect. Have received again assurance that Germany has induced foreign Powers to include administrative and police questions at the Tokio negotiation preserving Consular jurisdiction, its abolition (being) premature. Eisendecker will receive further instructions for friendly mediation. If you accept negotiating basis (at) Tokio as above mentioned, prevent any further action (in) London and answer by wire.

Mori will send you a copy of his letter to Granville, 9/8. Probably British Government (will) notify German Government about that letter. In that case, convince German Government that letter is not intended to mean that we will not have treaty except taking our proposed drafts.

From Inouye to Aoki.

Regarding to telegram (of) 27 September, I have received from Mori copies of correspondence passed between him and Granville. I do not approve those letters as I apprehend its tones have offended British Government. You should carefully consider and explain Kusserow at first opportunity our true sentiment, so that he might not get ill impression by those letters. I privately exposed (to) German Minister in Tokio that this Government never intend to offend foreign Powers, but—good and cultivating understanding at approaching negotiation, to discuss, with friendly spirit, as far as present necessities will require for both jurisdiction and commerce.

From Aoki to Inouye.

It is the French and British Governments which find the proposed modification in the system of the Consular Jurisdiction pretending that our justice has not yet been reformed in a desirable manner, though at the same time they and all others lay the greatest stress upon the opening of the whole Empire. Moreover both Governments seem not to accept even the new increased tariff on condition of the proposed expiration, being afraid of the steps which Japan may afterwards take turning out to autonomy. However, in the face of these circumstances the German Government are, though much puzzled, willing to exert their good offices for our interests and recommend to you the following clause:

The tariff shall be annulled after 8 or 10 years with one year's notice from our side if the Imperial Government resolve during this fixed termination to open the whole Empire for the foreign intercourse on condition of course that the exterritoriality should then entirely or partially cease according as the native jurisdiction will have improved in the meantime.

The German Government believe that in this way we keep the liberty to open the country or not, but we have in view, notwithstanding, the possibility of enjoying the advantage of the new increased Tariff whilst both Japan and Foreign Powers shall accustom themselves respectively to the idea of opening the whole country and of keeping no longer the Consular Jurisdiction; a movement which will contribute a great deal firstly to the preparing of

乙號 十六年四月二十八日發青木公使宛往電

From Inouye to Aoki.

Great difficulty is to make partial concessions and to decide how far Japanese Jurisdiction (has?) improved, that is, while we maintain it (has?) improved Foreign Powers will say no, hence endless discussions. It was with the object of over-coming this difficulty that I had proposed in the Conference intermediate period of transition. I refer you for details to page 10 and 11 of protocol No. 11 June last. (?) By entirely abolishing extraterritoriality, do they mean that such concessions can be made without any exemption or conditions, or to abolish it according to my proposition, that is, with certain terms and privileges more or less in favour of foreigners? Supposing tariff agreed with a view of cancelling it at the expiration of 8 years and arrangement for abolishing extraterritoriality may commence to operate at any time during this fixed period, but if Foreign Powers may find objection in this experiment after few years and insist upon coming back to the former state of things, will that be practically possible? I say no. Considering serious nature of preparation to be made, we can only continue it with hope of remedying defects and with the further terms of prolongation. Details by mail.

Therefore ascertain fully the views of German Government on this point and report minutely by letter.

April 28, 1883.

密函 十六年五月廿日發青木公使來電

From Aoki to Inouye.

You must not show my last telegram or this to German Minister. The Government of Germany do not propose to settle at present the question of jurisdiction. The acceptance of new Tariff will be certain, but English circular which arrived in the meantime here seems to avoid termination clause, which I still use best endeavours to secure. Al-for the adoption of the New Tariff with expiration of ten years, but must not take this decided step upon such condition as stated in your telegram. The term of that telegram appears to mean the absolute abolition of Consular Jurisdiction instantaneously with the opening of the whole country or does it mean that the country should be opened with such concessions, with the expiration of twelve years, as I proposed at the last conference, the appointment of foreign judges &c. See protocol 11. If the latter and foreign powers wish to lengthen the 12 to 15 years, we can accede to it.

Another term partially is very dangerous word. Suppose we open the whole country with partial recovery of our jurisdiction, how could we in the future regain the remaining part of jurisdiction?

If we open the whole country at once there will be no further concessions to be made when we claim jurisdiction in its entirety. Moreover, if we and foreign Governments differ in opinion as to the degree of improvement of our judicial affairs, the recovery of full jurisdiction over foreigners might though German Government, in consequence of my request, shows a disposition to recommend termination of 10, 12 or 15 years, they doubt success unless some condition favorable to foreign Powers be attached. This condition is to be that this right of terminating Tariff can not be exercised by Japan, unless, in the meantime viz. at the expiration of the Tariff, it has arrived at an understanding with foreign Powers to open the whole country, the condition of understanding be (?) a matter of subsequent negotiation. I wished to know whether I might say that you accept eventually such condition, but I think it is important that we should add in any case that the opening is of course conditional if application is made of the principle of territorial jurisdiction.

3 May, 1883.

密函 十六年五月九日發青木公使宛往電

From Inouye to Aoki.

I have no objection to your proposal that whole country should be opened as equivalent concession be delayed forever. Therefore if foreign powers give up only a portion of jurisdiction, we in return shall make such partial opening of the country as proportionate with their concession. Partial opening means the admittance of foreigners into interior for trade upon condition that all cases of delicts committed by foreigners should be adjudicated by local courts. See protocol 11 page 10. This gradual step seems more cautious and practicable. Do not take hasty action. Details by mail.

right of terminating the tariff, after the expiration of a term hereafter to be agreed upon, will be recognized. In consideration that not only the right of terminating commercial treaties after the expiration of their duration is an universally recognized principle in the intercourse of civilized nations and has already been conceded by Germany to an Asiatic power, but that also the liberal commercial policy of the Japanese Government and its formal adhesion to and actual observance of the Rules of international law, should entitle it to the full confidence of the foreign Powers in respect to its loyalty, the undersigned is bound to believe that his Government must attach the greatest value to the right in question, the more so as their object is not to abuse it by introducing hereafter a new economic policy injurious to foreign commerce, but to claim this right as a due recognition on the part of the foreign Governments of the accomplishments of their policy of Reforms which has been achieved with the devoted cooperation of the Japanese people since 1868 and which by an admission of this kind is of opinion that the negotiations regarding this question should not stand in the way of a speedy conclusion of the purely commercial questions and that the Government would be happy therefore to bring about an earlier settlement of the latter.

Encouraged by the repeated evidences of interest and of well meaning disposition on the part of the Imperial German Government, the undersigned has the honor to request His Excellency to be good enough to induce the German Government to intercede once more with the foreign powers in the above questions, more particularly in regard to the first, in order that by their friendly influence any unfavorable impression which might perhaps be entertained by any of the foreign powers in regard to it, might, as far as possible, be overcome and counteracted.

The undersigned etc.

Did you take any action since you got my last telegram of 14 addressed to Ito? Do not fail to re-would enable the Imperial Government to realize to their fullest extent the high objects they have had in view from the commencement.

The Imperial Government thinks it also desirable in the interest of public order and security and in that of the full development of their uniformly introduced administration, to point out the necessity of being invested without delay with the necessary means for carrying out police and internal administration by the application upon foreigners of the legislative and executive authority of the government. The want of a reform of this kind is universally felt and an understanding in the above sense would bring about a satisfactory solution of a most pressing question.

With regard to the modifications of the extraterritorial jurisdiction which for the reasons specified in the protocol and accompanied by almost unlimited concessions in regard to foreign residence, trade and possession of real property, was proposed by the Imperial Government but seemed not to meet the approval of certain powers, the Imperial Government

十六年五月十五日青木公使發獨外務卿宛往韓原文

Berlin, den 15. Mai 1883.

Nachdem die Kaiserlich Japanische Regierung den Vertretern der Vertragsmächte, welche voriges Jahr infolge der dankbarst amerikanischen Initiative der Kaiserlich Deutschen Regierung behufs Gewinnung einer gemeinsamen Basis für die Vertragsrevision in einer Konferenz zu Tokio zusammengetreten waren, eine Reihe von wichtigen Fragen in Betreff der Rechtverhältnisse und Handelsbedingungen der Ausländer in Japan vorgelegt hatte, und die Herrn liberale Handelspolitik Japans, sowie seine formelle Anerkennung und thatsächliche Observanz der völkerrechtlichen Normen hinsichtlich seiner Loyalität das vollste Vertrauen erwecken dürfte, glaubt der Unterzeichnete, dass seine Regierung auf die Anerkennung dieses Rechts einen um so grösseren Werth legen muss, als es für dieselbe sich nicht etwa darum handelt, dasselbe in der Zukunft zum Zweck einer dem fremden Handel schädlich Wirtschaftspolitik anzuwenden, sondern es sich vielmehr darum handelt, dieses Zugeständnis als eine gebührende Anerkennung der Reformen, in denen das Japanische Volk seit 1868 vertrauensvoll seiner Regierung gefolgt ist, zu erhalten, um hiedurch sich selbst in den Stand zu setzen, auch fernerhin das angestrebte Ziel mit erneuerten Kräften zu verfolgen zu können. Im Interesse der öffentlichen Ordnung und Sicherheit und der weiteren Entwicklung der einheitlich etablierten Verwaltung, glaubt die kaiserliche Regierung auch auf die Notwendigkeit hinweisen zu müssen, dass ihr auf dem Gebiet der Polizei und der inneren Verwaltung schon jetzt die

Das Befürfniß einer Reform in dieser Hinsicht wird von allen Beteiligten empfunden, und eine Vereinbarung im obigen Sinne, würde eine befriedigende Lösung der dringenden Frage herbeiführen. Hinsichtlich der Modifikation der exterritorialen Jurisdiktion, welche als den im Verhandlungsprotokoll näher bezeichneten Gründen, unter dem Anerbieten fast unbegrenzter Zugeständnisse, in Betreff der Niederlassung, des Handelsbetriebs und des Grunderwerbs der Ausländer, japanischerseits im Vorschlag gebracht wurde, doch bei einigen Mächten sich einer Zustimmung nicht zu erfreuen schien, ist die Kaiserliche Regierung der Ansicht, dass die Verhandlungen hierüber einem baldigen Abschluss der rein handelspolitischen Fragen nicht Wege stehen sollten, und ist daher gerne bereit, eine beschleunigende Friedigung der letzteren vorzugsweise herbeizuführen.

Gestützt auf das besondere Wohlwollen, welches ihre respektiven Regierungen berichtet haben, ist der Unterzeichnete von seiner Regierung beauftragt in dem folgenden Angelegenheiten, welche für diese von besonderer Wichtigkeit sind, die Kaiserlich Deutsche Regierung abermals um eine freundliche Annahme die europäischen Vertreter ihren Regierungen zu empfehlen beabsichtigten und daher Seitens der letzteren wohl keiner weiteren Schwierigkeit begegnen dürfen, sagt die kaiserlich Japanische Regierung den schlichsten Wunsch, dass ihr das Recht der Kündbarkeit nach Ablauf eines zu vereinbarten Termins zugestanden werde. In Anbe tracht, dass einerseits das Recht der Kündbarkeit eines Handelsvertrags nach Ablauf des festgesetzten Termins anerkanntmassen als ein gemeinsames Prinzip im Verkehr aller civilisierten Staaten gilt, und auch Seitens der kaiserlich Deutschen Regierung dasselbe bereits einer andern asiatischen Regierung zugestanden worden ist, und dass, anderseits die

die Kaiserlich Deutsche Regierung der Regierung Seiner Majestät des Kaisers von Japan zu wieder-holten Malen zu erkennen gegeben hat, gestattet sich der Unterzeichnete, die ganz ergebenste Bitte

an Seine Excellenz zu richten, geneigtest in den erwähnten Fragen, insbesondere aber mit Bezug-nahme auf den ersten Punkte, ein freundschaftliches Entgegenkommen bei den Vertragsmächten befürworten und falls hierüber eine ungünstige Auf-fassung obwalten sollte, derselben nach Möglichkeit, entgegenwirken zu wollen.

Gleichzeitig benutzt der Unterzeichnete diesen Anlass um Seiner Excellenz die Versicherung seiner ausgezeichnetsten Hochachtung zu erneuern.

From Aoki to Inouye.

According to my despatch you will see that the British Circular amounts to almost a refusal of our propositions, especially the termination clause. Government of Germany, however, has now by Circular interfered on our behalf especially to obtain termination. It proposes that the old rule of revision after some years should be preserved, but with the important addition that the Japanese Government should have a right to give notice to terminate Treaty after fifteen years, but that this right would only come in force if the Japanese Government have arrived, in the meantime, at an understanding with the foreign Powers in regard to the opening of the country, under the presumption always of an understanding upon the inherent conditions thereof such as the jurisdiction.

From Inouye to Aoki.

Just returned from Saikio and am much satisfied with your telegram of 22 instant, observing the well disposed intervention of German Government in favor of our proposition as against the English Circular, but I firmly believe that any arrangement, including the right of terminating the Treaty after a fixed period, is not advantageous to our interest if it should be coupled with any such condition as mentioned in your telegram, which apparently indicates that the question of opening the country and that of New Tariff are all taken together, while my view is to keep the two questions entirely separate as mentioned in my telegram of May 9th. Besides, the phrase "arrive at an understanding with the Foreign Powers" &c. in your telegram is very indefinite, because it is perfectly unforeseen what understanding foreign Governments would come to in spite of ours and, above all, the Termination Clause should be greatly weakened by the annexation of the said condition, the purport of which is directly against my view, because such uncertain condition is always productive of some questions in the future.

Endeavour in several ways, therefore, to accomplish the object without such conditions.

From Inouye to Aoki.

I approve the general principle involved in your communication to German Minister for Foreign Affairs dated May 15, which seems somewhat different from your telegram of 22 ultimo as the latter contained such a conditional proposition as tending to the production of questions in future. Exert, therefore, your best endeavour so as to secure German good offices upon the principle you proposed.

At an interview of 18 instant, French charge' d'Affaires in Japan read me a confidential instruction from French Minister for Foreign Affairs, essence being that French Government considers our proposal generally just and reasonable, agrees fully to the separate arrangement of tariff and commercial question, but to effect this requires the general consent of all powers. French government is will-matter on.

Now I desire to make an effort upon Italy but I have reason to think that our Legation in Italy requires much assistance in the matter. Therefore, go to Paris where you shall meet Mori and Hachisuka and have a consultation so that there shall be generality and unity of action and understanding, giving Asano general advice on the matter. Give him a memorandum founded upon the proposals you presented to German Government only....to make it still stronger.

ing to take initiative steps to induce other powers. Later, American Minister in Japan asked an al-lowance for (?) and said that his government received the English circular and he is instructed to ascertain the attitude of our government regarding it. He did not show me the circular but read me essential points. I answered "although I have not yet seen the circular, if conditions which are mentioned are really found in it, I could not accept it. My last resort is to strictly stick to existing treaty and enforce them systematically." The American Minister was satisfied with my decision saying he will so report to his government.

Transmit the following also to Mori. Judging from Hachisuka's telegram from Belgium, it would seem German Government has already issued its circular. If so, endeavour to inform me its points. The reason of new move on the part of France is supposed to have its foundation in Annam difficulty and while our Government has no idea of making combination with her against China, we must make most of this turn of events, therefore, to push the

Draft

The conciliating spirit in which the Royal Italian Government has, throughout the negotiations for the Revision of the Treaties, met the wishes and positions of the Imperial Japanese Government, has not failed to produce on the latter the most profound impression of satisfaction and gratitude. It has been moreover, for the Undersigned, a most pleasant duty to report to his Government the friendly interest repeatedly shown by His Excellency the Minister for Foreign Affairs for a satisfac-terminating commercial treaties after the expiration of their duration is an universally recognized principle in the intercourse of civilized nations and has already been conceded by the Western Governments to Asiatic Powers but that also the liberal commercial policy of the Japanese Government and its formal adhesion to and actual observance of the Rules of International Law should entitle it to the full confidence of the foreign Powers in respect to its loyalty, the Undersigned is informed that his Government most attaches the greatest value to the right in question, the more so as their object is not to abuse it by introducing hereafter a new economic policy injurious to foreign commerce but to claim this right as a due recognition on the part of the foreign Governments of the accomplishments of their policy of reforms which has been achieved with the devoted cooperation of the Japanese people since 1868 and which, by an admission of this kind, would enable the Imperial Government to realize, to their fullest extent, the high objects they have had in view from the beginning.

ry solution of this important question at issue. Encouraged by these repeated evidences of good will and of an enlightened appreciation of the loyal attitude taken by the Imperial Government, the latter have instructed the Undersigned to place before His Excellency and exposé of the views entertained by the Imperial Government at the present conjuncture and have charged him to make an appeal to the good offices of the Royal Italian Government with the view of bringing about, in common with the other Treaty Powers, a speedy and satisfactory solution of this long pending question.

The Imperial Government is of opinion that the European Representatives having, in regard to the Tariff, expressed their intention to propose its altered acceptance their governments, the Imperial Government trusts therefore that no particular difficulty in regard to this will be encountered and it entertains the most anxious desire that her right of terminating the tariff after the expiration of a term, hereafter to be agreed upon, will be recognized. In consideration that not only the right of

The Imperial Government thinks it also desirable in the interest of public orders and security and in that of the full development of their uniformly introduced administration, to point out the necessity of being invested, without delay, with the necessary means for carrying out police and measures of internal administration by the application upon foreigners of the legislative and executive powers. The want of a reform of this kind is universally felt and an understanding in the above sense would bring about a satisfactory solution of a most urgent reform.

With regard to the modification of the extraterritorial jurisdiction which, for the reasons specified in the protocol and accompanied by almost unlimited concessions in regard to foreign residence, trade and possession of real property, was proposed by the Imperial Government but seemed not to meet the approval of certain powers, the Imperial Government is of opinion that the negotiations regarding this question should not stand in the way of a speedy conclusion of the purely commercial questions and that the Government would be happy, therefore, to bring about an earlier settlement of the latter. The Undersigned, in having the honour of placing here-with the views entertained by his Government before His Excellency, sincerely trusts that the spirit of equity and liberality which has uniformly characterized the foreign policy of the Royal Italian Government, will also, in this case, be applied to Japan which pursues the same high objects of national unification and progress so eminently achieved by the Italian nation!

The Undersigned therefore, in recommending the above exposé to the favourable consideration of His Excellency, feels confident that the Royal Government will be pleased in recognizing the justice of the Japanese propositions and employ, if necessary, such measures of friendly recommendation with the other Treaty Powers as seem best calculated to remove any difficulties in the way of an unanimous and satisfactory settlement of the negotiations.

From Inouye to Aoki.

I answered to German Minister in continuation of the interview of first ultimo, which I telegraphed you on 18th, that German Government having consented to the separate settlement of commercial part and its termination, we accepted the condition attached to it, that is, our Government should have right to denounce the whole treaty provided we are ready to open the whole country at the expiration of new commercial treaty.

With reference to Favoured Nation clause, we accepted principles in supplementary conventions of German-China treaty of 1881 but, foreigners trading in interior being closely connected with question of jurisdiction, I wished to discuss it simultaneously with jurisdiction question. Therefore, instead of this, I said we shall open two or three ports favourable for commerce and also to concede coasting trade under system of chartering foreign vessels by Japanese for 10 years only, our geographical position forbidding to concede it forever. If at expiration of new commercial treaty and contingency

From Inouye to Aoki.

I have just instructed Mori as follows: to be adopted British Memorandum (?) seems to us almost impossible to agree to an arrangement providing three years' probational period before we exercise the right of termination, as we fail to see how such to modify its views in our favour before Plunkett's departure.

Have reason to assure you that German Government already induced British Government to modify their view and are energetically trying to get the success for our favour.

註屬書 III

丙號 十七年 1月 11 日附青木公使來電

From Aoki to Inouye.

German Government have taken steps in our favour immediately after receiving British Memorandum, particularly recommended concession respecting administrative question as equivalent for greater liberty of travelling to be granted by Japan not for commercial purposes. Respecting most favoured nation, they maintain their former proposition. They seem also inclined towards moderation of British condition may be rendered practicable.

The extention of passport system for commercial purpose in the interior would necessarily involve the question of jurisdiction and it seems impossible to enter into the separate arrangement of one without touching the other. We are, therefore, compelled to defer this question until we come to discuss the question of jurisdiction.

Coasting trade would only be acceptable under charter system as proposed in the conference and for a limited period.

As to favoured nation clause you will urge him to adopt more liberal view, something at least similar to German propositions which we consider acceptable.

As to all other detailed subjects, we do not feel much difficulty to come to understanding at your discretion. If you think the circumstance is still favourable, pray, lose no time to lay the observations before German Minister for Foreign Affairs and do your best efforts to invoke their assistance to influence English Minister for Foreign Affairs proposition of 3 years' probational period.

January 3, 1884.

註屬書 IV

丁號 十七年 1月 11 日附青木公使發獨外務卿宛往翰英譯文

Translation

Berlin, January 10, 1884.

The Undersigned has the honour to inform His Excellency the Minister of State and Secretary of state for Foreign Affairs Count Hatzfeldt Wildenburg that the Imperial Japanese Government have, upon the receipt of the confidential communication from Count Doenhoff, the Imperial German Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary accredited to the Imperial Japanese Court in respect to the details of the German mediation in the question of the Revision, charged the Undersigned to convey to the Imperial German Government their feelings of sincere gratitude for this renewed proof of a friendly disposition on their behalf.

The Undersigned in renewing to-day these expressions which he had already the honor to present verbally to Mr. Busch, the Privy Councillor of Legislation and Under Secretary of State begs at the same time, under instructions from his government, to draw the attention of the Imperial German Government to the circular in which the Cabinet of St. James have communicated their opinion on the said question on the 11th December of last year.

The Imperial Japanese Government has received cognizance of this document not without feelings of disappointment as they fail to find therein a material concurrence with the views put forward by the Imperial German Government accepted by Japan. The Imperial Japanese Government can, therefore, not dissimulate its apprehensions that an insistence upon the views of the British Government would, on the one hand, exercise a prejudicial effect on the well-intentioned efforts of the Imperial German Government, whilst on the other hand the concessions claimed from the Imperial Japanese Government are of such a nature as must awaken the most serious doubts as to the success of the coming negotiations. The points about which the Imperial

Japanese Government feel it necessary to express their difference are:

1) The proposition that the Japanese Government shall only enjoy the right of denunciation after the modalities, under which the interior is opened to foreign intercourse, has been submitted to a three years' probation, whilst, according to the German proposition, the Japanese Government would enjoy immediately the right of denunciation upon the expiration of the period fixed for the duration, only on the condition of finally opening the country, subject always to a modification of the existing jurisdiction, previously to be settled by mutual agreement.

This British proposition contains besides incompatibilities with the legal order of state, for on the one side it is evident that the nature of the rights to be granted to foreigners on the opening of the country (for instance the possession of real estate) excludes in itself the possibility of a return to the status quo ante at the expiration of the probational period, whilst on the other side the Imperial Japanese Government can not expose itself to the hazard of finding itself eventually, at the expiration of the probational period, placed in face of propositions having for their object again a limitation of their newly restored Sovereign Right.

2) The requirement (?) of an extension of the existing passport system. Should the British Memorandum with the passage "such extended freedom of communication with the dealers in the interior" means to claim the liberty of travelling in the interior for commercial purposes, it must be observed that such a concession would in fact amount to the same thing as the opening of the country, without any concession in regard to the reform of jurisdiction claimed by Japan.

3) The maintenance of the terms of the most favoured nation clause. In regard to this, the Imperial Japanese Government had proposed a modification based upon the necessities of practical experience which the Imperial German Government had supported by a counter-proposition.

The Undersigned begs also to add that the proposition for an extension of the administrative powers which the German Government had recommended, under a correct appreciation of the actual necessities, seems not to have met, in the English memorandum, with a consenting reply.

Under these circumstances, the Imperial Japanese Government is obliged to recur again to the good offices of the Imperial German Government and has given to the Undersigned instructions to request His Excellency to be good enough to take such steps as will bring, as far as possible, the views of the British Government in accordance with those held by His Excellency's Government, or at least to obtain such modifications of the British views as will remove those points which are in open contrast with those of the Imperial German Government.

As the newly appointed British Envoy to Japan Mr. Plunkett will, as it appears, proceed by the end of this month to his new post, the Undersigned may be allowed to add in conclusion that it seems to all parties concerned that an understanding be arrived at by all the Treaty Powers on the basis of the German propositions, if possible, before the departure of the said British Representative.

The Undersigned etc.

From Inouye to Aoki.

Unable to find the proposal of 4 last July. Telegraph its main principles as clearly as possible. In my memorandum of 21 last October to the German Minister in Tokio, I stated utmost we can do. Therefore, we desire instruction to him may be as near to it as possible. Submit this fact to German Government, endeavour to secure this result.

The English Minister in Japan gave me substance of English counter proposal. Main points are:

1. Assent to tariff if other Powers do the same.
2. This on condition of giving to foreigners facilties for trade and communication with the interior or.

3. The settlement of tariff question first.
4. Willing to insert a clause in the new commercial convention which stipulates that after 12 years either party may terminate commercial treaty alone by 12 months previous notice. This however on condition that before Japan can give such notice she shall have already thrown open the whole Empire for 2 or 3 years under arrangement which Powers shall have accepted.
5. Greater extension of passport system and visit of foreign vessels and trade at ports not yet open.
6. They will not agree to modifications of favoured nation clause.

To the fourth point we can never agree and if he insists upon it negotiation will come to a great danger.

April 13, 1884.

乙號 十七年四月十七日發青木公使來電

From Aoki to Inouye.

According to written instructions Doenhoff and Zappe are authorized:

- A. To conclude commercial convention inclusive tariff and other commercial and navigation matters. 1) our right of pronouncing depends on condition that the Empire should be opened after 8 years by a Japanese law which will settle all judicial subjects according to previous understanding with the Powers. German Government intend to avoid in this way English proposal of 3 years' probational period. 2) as to favoured nation clause, Germany holds its intermediaional proposal. 3) acceptance of tariff, if possible, unaltered. 4) requirement of coasting trade according to your proposal, but under Consular jurisdiction as to foreigners.
- B. To agree an arrangement that Japanese administrative laws will be applied to foreigners on condition of granting them facilities for communication viz. extension of passport system, but expressly not for commercial purposes. The severity of punishment and fine in this regard, should be however commensurated to 3 months imprisonment or 500 dollars.

- C. To take part in any conference or negotiation at any time henceforth when the new regulating of judicial matter in consequence of Japanese wishes should be discussed in order to further our mutual interest, that is, the Empire should be opened under recognizance of the territorial jurisdiction.
- Hoping all these might meet your wishes, I inform you that the English Minister is not so anxiously bound, as you think, on his instruction I have read. Please consult with Zappe confidentially on all.

丁號 十七年五月二十一日附青木公使宛往電

From Inouye to Aoki.

From an American source, confidentially obtained German circular of July 4 to the other Powers:

1. German Government is willing to give us right of terminating treaties, presumably all treaties, after 8 years with promise that Japan is not to exercise this right before an understanding, presumably meaning certain arrangement regard-verbal note of October last to Doenhoff, I was careful to say that upon opening the country (we wish?) to have the right of denouncing the whole treaty, meaning all treaties including all those stipulations appertaining to Consular jurisdiction etc. Entire opening of the country must necessarily be linked together with the entire relinquishment of foreign Jurisdiction. You will easily perceive the necessity of this position from which it will be impossible for us to retreat. If it be finally found impossible to come to agreement to set forth clearly in the new convention a stipulation to the above effect, it would be preferable to avoid any stipulation regarding the opening of the country and the denunciation of all treaties. But, having concluded to hold(?) commercial conventions, we will still continue from time to time negotiations with a view to settle jurisdiction question by proportionate concession. We have entirely destroyed probation period of the English memorandum by sound reasoning and logical argument and Plunkett has finally taken it out from the memorandum. Sug-

ing jurisdiction, has been reached with Treaty Powers with respect to opening of the whole country, whereas your telegram of last April say that we can denounce on condition the Empire should be opened by the Japanese law which will settle all judicial subjects.

2. Circular grants us only more extensive police privileges on condition of greater liberty to foreigners, making settlement in the country, acquisition of property and travel in the interior by the agents of commercial houses, whereas according to your telegram German Government will give us the right of applying administrative laws (up to?) three months imprisonment and five hundred dollars fine on condition only of extension of passport system not expressly for commercial purposes.

In view of these differences, it is supposed that some improvements in our favor have been made in the position (?) of German Government since it issued the July Circular. Report exact points, if any, of such improvements. In my confidential gestion in your private note of 3 April does not meet my idea, as it (savours?) too much of Turkish Capitulation and you should try to dispel any impression may have been (made?) upon German Government by reason of this suggestion. Try your hardest to have German Government to send its instructions as soon as possible. Most of the Ministers are soon(?).

Berlin, den 4.^{ten} April 1884

Most confidential!

Die deutschen Delegirten werden sich an weiteren Verhandlungen über alle Fragen betheilgen, welche in der Konferenz in Tokio im Jahr 1882 zur Sprache gekommen sind.

I. Sie sind ermöglicht eine Zusatz-Konvention zu dem Deutsch-Japanischen Vertrage vom 20. Januar 1869 zu unterzeichnen, sobald der Inhalt derselben durch die Konferenz Vereinbart sein wird.

die hierauf bezüglichen Abmachungen ebenfalls in die von ihnen zu unterzeichnenden Zusatz-Konvention aufzunehmen.

III. Nachdem von der Japanischen Regierung die Neuregelung der Jurisdicitions-Verhältnisse als Vorbereitung der vollständigen Eröffnung des Landes für den fremden Handel bezeichnet worden ist, sind die deutschen Delegirten ermächtigt, an der im allseitigen Interesse liegenden Lösung dieser Frage, sei es auf der Konferenz, oder in besonderem Verhandlungen, Theil zu nehmen.

Ad: I

Bei den Verhandlungen zur definitiven Feststellung einer gleichmässigen Grundlage für die zunächst abzuschliessenden Zusatz-Konventionen zu den bestehenden Verträgen werden die deutschen Bevollmächtigten

1. das von der Japanischen Regierung in Anspruch genommene Recht der Kündigung nach Ablauf einer Frist von etwa 8 Jahren unter der Bedingung zugestehen, dass die Japanische Regierung von diesem Recht keinerfalls früher Gebrauch machen

Nach Ansicht der Kaiserlichen Regierung werden den Gegenstand dieser Zusatz-Konvention in erster Linie der neue Einfuhrzoll-Tarif und alle auf Handels- und Schiffahrtsverhältnisse bezüglichen Angelegenheiten bilden, über welche auf der im Jahre 1882 gewonnenen Grundlage voraussichtlich in kurzer Zeit das volle Einverständniss zwischen den fremden Vertretern und den Bevollmächtigten der Japanischen Regierung zu erreichen sein wird, während andere, noch nicht hinlänglich vorbereitete Fragen, wie z. B. der Schutz für Fabrikmarken, Patente und Erfindungen besser späteren, besondern Abmachungen vorzubehalten sind.

II. Die Deutschen Delegirten sind angewiesen, sich an einer Verständigung über die Anwendbarkeit Japanischer Verwaltungsgesetze auf die Angehörigen der Vertrags-Mächte in der Veraussetzung zu betheiligen, dass die Japanische Regierung sich hierfür zu angemessenen Gegenleistungen im Interesse der Fremden bereit finden lässt.

Sollte die Verständigung hierüber bald gelingen, so würden die Deutschen Vertreter ermächtigt sein, dart, als sie auf Grund der hierüber (sub III) verbehaltenen vertragsmässigen Verständig mit den Vertrags-Mächten dem fremden Handel das ganze Reich durch ein Japanisches Gesetz thatsächlich eröffnet haben wird. Sie sind angewiesen, sich mit den Bevollmächtigten der anderen Vertrag-Mächte und der Japanischen Regierung über eine Fassung zu verständigen, welche diesem Vorschlage entspricht.

2. Dem Wunsche der Japanischen Regierung die Meistbegünstigungsklausel der bestehenden Verträge zu modifizieren, ist die Kaiserliche Regierung soweit entgengzukommen geneigt, als dies ihrerseits in der Bestimmung der Art. 1. der deutsch-chinesischen Zusatz-Konvention vom 31. März 1880 der chinesischen Regierung gegegeben geschehen ist.

Es ist fierbei jedoch ausdrücklich davon festzuhalten, dass die Gewährung eines auf Grund der Meistbegünstigung in Anspruch genommen Rechts nicht, wie die japanischen Regierung früher verlangte, von der Bedingung materiell gleicher oder gleichuertheriger Gegenleistungen, sondern nur von der Befolgung der nämlichen Ausführungs-Bestimmungen abhängig gemacht werden darf, an welche in einem bestimmten Fall der Genuss des betreffenden Rechtes etwa geknüpft worden ist. Unter Ausführungs-Bestimmungen versteht die erwähnte Zusatz-Konvention mit China Bestimmungen, welche einen lediglich administrativen oder zollamtlichen Charakter haben, und durch welche die praktische Ausführbarkeit eines ganz bestimmten Zugeständnisses bedingt ist.

3. Der im Jahre 1882 vereinbarte Entwurf zu einem neuen Eiuhr-Zolltarif ist ein Kompromiss, der nach Ansicht der Kaiserlichen Regierung aufrückerthalten werden sollte. Um indess den von einzelnen anderen Regierungen geäußerten Wünschen entgegenzukommen, sind die deutschen Delegirten ermächtigt, solchen Abänderungsvorschlägen zu jenem Tarif-Etuwurf zuzustimmen, mit denen die Vertreter der übrigen Vertragsmächte und der Japanischen Regierung einverstanden sein werden. Gegenüber der erheblichen Erhöhung der bestehenden Eingangszölle, welche die Vertragsmächte der inbarungen angehängten Regulative treten sollen, einen integrirenden Theil der neuen Konventionen zu bilden haben.

Da die im Jahre 1882 begonnenen kommissarischen Berathungen über solche neue Regulative nicht zum Abschluss gelangt waren, so werden die deutschen Delegirten sich für die sofortige Fortsetzung dieser Berathungen unter Hinzuziehung von kaufmännischen Sachverständigen aussprechen und als eine geeignete Grundlage der Verhandlungen hierüber die Handels-Regulative bezeichnen, welche den am 26. November 1883 in Seül unterzeichneten Verträgen zwischen Deutschland und Grossbritannien einerseits und Korea anderseits angehängt sind, und welche in der Hauptsache der in Japan gewonnenen Erfahrungen Rechnung tragen.

7. Da die Japanische Regierung die unbedingte Freigabe der Küstenschiffahrt abgelehnt, sich dagegen bereit erklärt hat, auf eine Reihe von Japanischen Regierung zugestehen, ist Werth darauf zu legen, dass die letztere, sei es in der Konvention, oder in einem derselben anzuhangenden Protokoll die Verpflichtung anerkennen, mindestens einen beträchtlichen Theil der Mehreinnahmen aus dem Tarif zur Ordnung der Japanischen Valuta zu verwenden.

4. Die Zusatz-Konventionen werden genaue Bestimmungen über dasjenige Verfahren enthalten müssen, welches zu beobachten ist, wenn bei der Zollerhebung nach dem neuen Tarife über den Werth einer Ware, auf welche ein Werthzoll zu entrichten ist, Meinungsverschiedenheiten entstehen.

5. Die Deutschen Vertreter werden für die Aufnahme klarer Bestimmungen in die Zusatz-Konvention eintreten, durch welche ein den gerechten Wünschen des fremden Handelsstandes entsprechendes kombiniertes System von Rückzöllen (draw backs) und Zollniederlage (entrepoés, bonded-warehouses) gesichert wird.

6. Sie werden verlangen, dass die Handels-Regulative, welche an Stelle der den bestehenden Vere-

Jahren den fremden Flaggen das Recht zur Küsten-Frachtfahrt zwischen uneröffneten Häfen unter Japanischer Verfrachtung zuzugestehen, so werden die deutschen Delegirten bemüht sein, dahin zu wirken, dass dieser Zugeständniss für die Dauer der Konvention selbst, oder mindestens auf zehn Jahre den Fremden erhalten bleibt.

Was die Vorschriften anbelangt, welchen die fremden Schiffe und deren Mannschaften in dem dem Handel noch nicht eröffneten Häfen unterworfen sind, so werden, vorbehaltlich der sub II erwähnten Verständigung über die Anwendbarkeit Japanischer Verwaltungs-Gesetze auf Fremde, die bestehenden Jurisdiktionsverhältnisse bis auf Weiteres nicht abgeändert werden dürfen. Die Gerichtsbarkeit über fremde Seeleute wird daher in allen Fällen vorerst den fremden Gerichten, die Gerichtsbarkeit über die auf fremden Schiffen dienenden Japaner in den Fällen strafbarer Handlungen, welche an Bord fremder Schiffe in Japanischen Häfen oder am Lande begangen werden, den Japanischen Gerichten verbleiben. Die Schiffdisciplin würde Sache des Schiffsführers bleiben, gleichviel ob es sich um Fremde oder um Japaner handelt.

8. Die Deutschen Bevollmächtigten sind angewiesen, für die Erhebung von Leuchthaus-, Hafen-, und Tonnengeldern von fremden Schiffen in Japanischen Häfen einen auszuarbeitenden Reglement zuzustimmen, welches entweder gleichfalls integrierender Bestandtheil der neuen Konventionen sein, oder wenigstens innerhalb einer bestimmten Frist in Kraft treten soll.

Dasselbe wird sich, vorbehaltlich einzelner Modificationen, im Wesentlichen auf die Vorschläge des Grossbritannischen Vertreters in der Konferenz vom 5. Mai 1882: Protokoll 9.: stützen können.

9. Es wird in das freie Ermessen der Deutschen Delegirten gestellt, ob der von dem fremden Handelstande geäußerte Wunsch wegen Schutzes gegen Beeinträchtigungen ihrer Interessen durch Coalitionen zum Ausschuss fremder Waaren, bei Gelegenheit der Verhandlungen über die Handels-Konventionen berücksichtigt werden kann oder den Gegen stand eines besonderen Meinungsaus-

Vertragsmächte und nach gehöriger Bekanntmachung durch die zuständigen Organe der betreffenden fremden Länder in den hierfür üblichen Formen, auch auf die Angehörigen der letzteren Japan Anwendung finden sollen.

2. Was die in solchen Japanischen Verwaltungsgesetzen zu treffenden Strafvorschriften anbelangt, so wird die abzuschließende Vereinbarung ein bestimmtes Strafmaß festzusetzen haben. Bei Festsetzung des zulässigen Höchstbetrages der androhenden Strafen wird die Vereinbarung sich an die Bestimmung der Britischen "China and Japan Orders in Council" von 1865 und 1881 anschliessen können, welche den Britischen Gesandten ermächtigen, bei Ausübung seines Verordnungsrechts Gefängniß bis zu drei Monaten, oder Geldstrafe bis zu 500 (Mexikanischen) Dollars anzudrohen.

3. Die strafrechtliche Verfolgung von Zuwiderhandlungen gegen Japanischen Gesetze muss soweit es sich um Angehörige der Vertragsmächte handelt, ausschließlich den Konsularbehörden solange vor behalten bleiben, als nicht die Bestimmungen der tauches und Abkommens bilden soll.

Ad. 2

1. Hinsichtlich der Frage wegen Unterwerfung der Ausländer unter Japanische Verwaltungsgesetze erkennt die Kaiserlich Deutsche Regierung an, dass zahlreiche Vorschriften auf dem Gebiet der Polizei, und innerer Verwaltung in Japan nur dann mit Erfolg durchzuführen sind, wenn diesen gleichmäßig die Japaner und alle in Japan lebenden Fremden unterwerfen werden. Die verschiedenartige Gestaltung, welche das konsularische Verordnungsrecht in der Gesetzgebung der verschiedenen Vertragsmächte erhalten hat, schliesst die Möglichkeit aus, ohne eine gleichmässige konventionelle Grundlage dem Bedürfniss im Wege der Verordnungsrechte des Konsuls genügen.

Die Deutschen Delegirten werden deshalb unter der Bedingung einer angemessenen Gegenleistung von Seiten Japans einer Vereinbarung zustimmen, auf Grund deren die auf dem Gebiet der Polizei- und inneren Verwaltung erlassenen Japanischen Gesetze mit vorgängiger Genehmigung der Regierungen der Verträge über die Jurisdiktionsverhältnisse in Verbindung mit der Eröffnung des Landes eine Umgestaltung erfahren haben werden. Die auf trischer That ergriffenen Ausländer werden daher der Japanischen Polizeibehörde nur behufs Feststellung ihrer Personen, nicht aber auch zur Feststellung des Thatbestandes vorzuführen sein.

4. In Hinsicht der Einleitung und des Ganges des Strafverfahrens wird jede Konsularbehörde nach Massgabe der sonst für sie geltenden Gesetze vorzugehen geben.

5. Unbeschadet des Grundsatzes, dass Japanische Verwaltungsgesetze nicht ohne Zustimmung der fremden Regierungen auf deren Angehörige Anwendung finden sollen, erscheint es angemessen, dass bestimmte, von der Japanischen Regierung auf dem Gebiete der Polizei und der inneren Verwaltung erlassene Gesetze in dringenden Fällen, insbesondere bei Vorhandensein eines öffentlichen Notstandes oder gemeiner Gefahr auch für die Fremden vorläufige Verbindlichkeit dadurch erlangen können, dass sie von den zuständigen Vertretern Vertragsmächte, vorbehaltlich der endgültigen Entscheidung ihrer Regierungen, einstweilen verkündet werden. Dieselben werden jedoch für die Fremden wieder ausser Wirksamkeit treten, sobald ihnen seitens der Regierungen der Vertragsmächte die Bestätigung versagt werden sollte.

6. Als unerlässliche Verbedingung für dieses Zuständniss der Anwendbarkeit von Japanischen Vertragsgesetzen auf die Angehörigen der Vertragsmächte von der vollständigen Eröffnung des ganzen Landes wird die Gewährung von Reisepässen für wissenschaftliche, für Vergnügungs und Gesundheitszwecke zu verlangen sein.

7. Ausserdem werden die Deutschen Delegirten dahin zu wirken bemüht sein, dass vorbehaltlich der Eröffnung des ganzen Reiches für den fremden Handelsbetrieb jetzt wenigstens den fremden Kaufleuten das Umherreisen mit Mustern und Waarenproben zur Verbreitung der Kenntniss fremder Erzeugnisse bei den Japanischen Händlern und Konsumenten im Innern unter ausreichenden Garantien gegen den unbefugten Verkauf von und nur schrittweise und nicht ohne erneutes Einvernehmen unter den Vertragsmächten ihrer Lösung näher geführt werden können.

Die Deutschen Konferenzdelegirten sind dagegen ermächtigt, die sub I und II aufgeführten Fragen alsbald und ohne erneute Instruktionsertheilung im Wege der Verständigung mit den Vertretern der andern Vertragsmächte und der Japanischen Regierung zum vertragsmässigen Abschluss zu bringen.

Instruktion für die Kaiserlichen Vertreter in der Konferenz zu Tokio, betreffend die Revision der Verträge mit Japan.

Waaren ausserhalb der Vertragsgrenzen gestattet werde.

Die Kaiserliche Regierung wird dieses Gegenzugeständniss zwar nicht als conditio sine qua non behandeln, sie hofft aber, dass es im Laufe der bevorstehenden Verhandlungen gelingen werde, die Japanische Regierung zu überzeugen, dass die von dieser Konzession zu erwartende Steigerung des Imports fremder Erzeugniss der Japanischen Zollkasse in demselben Verhältniss zu Statten kommen würde, als dem fremden Handee.

Ad. 3.

Die Deutschen Delegirten sind ermächtigt, jeder Zeit, sobald den Japanischen Regierung den Wunsch hierzu äussert, mit ihr und den Vertretern der übrigen Vertragsmächte auch über die Abänderung der auf Gerichtsbarkeit bezüglichen Bestimmungen der bestehenden Verträge zu verhandeln, um hierdurch die taftfächliche Erschließung des ganzen Japanischen Reichs für den fremden Handel nach Kräften zu fördern. Diese Reform wird voraussichtlich eine langjährige Arbeit in Anspruch nehmen

From Inouye to Aoki.

German Minister in Tokio has received full instructions which was shown to me. Am rather disappointed. They are much the same as English, if not worse. German Minister now states that meaning of that paragraph in your telegram of April marked 6 is that administrative laws of Japan will be recognized adopted and enforced, in the same manner as English do, by Orders in Council. This hardly meets my views because I have been led to understand otherwise by your, telegram of April. Now, what we would concede and desire to be conceded in return, without touching these points in which we are already agreed, are as follows:

1. Tariff as finally agreed at the Conference should not be subjected to any modification whatever.
2. Willing to establish three accessible ports for foreign vessels which is desired by England, instead of open ports, and to allow mixed residence within certain limits around such ports, the extent of which to be decided hereafter.
3. Accessible ports differ from open ports in not having any Consulate therein established.
4. Hence it is absolutely necessary that our administrative laws, both ^{local} and local, should be recognized without further enactment by the foreign Minister and be observed by foreign subjects and administered by Japanese tribunals, severity of punishment and fine, however, to be limited to fine of five hundred dollars or three months imprisonment.
5. The above should also be made applicable to hitherto open ports.

6. Willing to issue passports for any purpose to any responsible persons through the Kenrei instead of through Minister as heretofore, provided that the holder shall not trade or enter into any commercial transaction in the interior and that these travellers, while in the interior, shall be subjected to the provisions of § 3 of § 3 of this telegram with these points in view.
- I desire you to endeavour without delay to achieve our objects.

From Aoki to Inouye.

In spite of all my requests and energetic remonstrances Bismarck considers your propositions (submitted in your telegrams of 30 ultimo and 14 instant) inopportune, believing that they would be unacceptable for the other Governments which are already jealous enough of his hitherto supporting your schemes. He, therefore, abstains from his consent to your proposals and refuses every mediation, ascertaining that the German authority, which could become useful for Japan in another case, would suffer a loss if he took again initiative in the matter after having found so many (?) opportunities by other Governments. Under these circumstances, my unqualified opinion is to settle at once commercial matters only and to postpone the

From Inouye to Aoki.
Received the copy of German instruction you sent. German arrangement of enforcing Japanese administrative laws and regulations is impossible and impracticable. It is very necessary to apply them over foreigners without any such interference and I will shortly submit our counter memorandum to English memorandum in which I will demand the application of all administrative, police and local regulation in accessible and present open ports and over foreigners travelling in the interior and engaged in coasting trade, without any interference by Powers or through their representatives and by drawing a line (?) I will be content with the extent of 20 yen fine and 10 days imprisonment, up to that limit our courts to have the right to adjudicate also jurisdiction in civil cases arising from the commercial transactions between Japanese and foreigners both at accessible and open ports to the amount of 500 yen. Use your utmost effort to obtain the consent of the German Government to those propositions and to give instruction to its matter in question. If you will, notwithstanding, try to carry out your propositions, I believe it may perhaps be practicable to apply to the English Government for that sake. Are you of this opinion? I propose you to send me to London with necessary authorization. I will then try my hardest there.

Your telegram of 21 approved. Our memorandum is about to be handed to British Minister in Tokio. I am obliged to make little change in the proposition I telegraphed you (on) 30 May and 14 June. Present open ports have been excluded from exercise of limited jurisdiction both in respect to the violation of administrative etc. regulations and civil cases and the limit of 20 yen fine has been raised to 30 yen. In making this exception, I do not relinquish the desire and importance of maintaining a uniform system as to the application of those regulations, but simply defer negotiation, so far as enforcement of limited jurisdiction is concerned, till after the conclusion of commercial convention. This is my ultimatum from which I can never retreat. The most important part of my proposition is foreigners to obey all our administrative etc. regulations without intervention of Powers. With this in view, urge most strongly upon Bismarck the importance of our proposition and also the fact that we can not open the Empire without entire abolition of foreign jurisdiction and tariff autonomy as well i. e. these should be contemporaneous. It may seem to you I too easily change views, but circumstances oblige me to change my tactics.

From Aoki to Inouye.

Count Hatzfeldt informs me that in consequence of communication by Zappe that England seems suddenly inclined to abandon former resistance as to some concessions in administrative question, Prince Bismarck has authorized by telegraph German Delegates to consent to all such concessions as British Representative would do.

to early enforcement of the new tariff, transitory clauses being reserved. As to jurisdiction, English Government will consent on condition that, after expiration of 17 years, Japanese Government should give guarantees for proper administration of Japanese tribunals. German Government would find this guarantees in a stipulation maintaining foreign judges after that period until a new convention with regard to their abolition should be concluded. If you consent to it, German Government is willing to act in this way at London Cabinet. Keep it confidential also from German Minister and English Minister.

Referring to your last telegram, I assure you that German Government, by its good-will, is willing to make that proposal to England, will prevent that (?) England demands conditions which would then be still worse for Japan. Berchem and Reichard said that German Government has never consented to abolition of foreign judges in other laws (?) without a condition, but this time German government makes no condition in Japan. Please be assured that German Government will make that proposal mentioned in my least telegram only in favor of Japan. I hope you will consent, else it is possible that our whole endeavour with regard to jurisdiction can miscarry (?).

From your telegram of 17 and 4 we cannot his government consent to early enforcement of the new tariff on condition that in case Japanese Government would be unable to open the country in two years as promised the old tariff would again come into force. As to the stipulation in respect to the mainting of foreign judges after expiration of jurisdictional convention, as mentioned by you, I personally assure you that no engagement as to subsequent employment of foreign judges can be given by us. See Berchem and Reichard and give them my personal assurance that there need be no apprehension on the part of treaty Powers in respect to the period after 17 years and that, sincerely speaking, no necessity can exist for making arrangement for this, because we are really willing to satisfy Powers by our sincere intention and continued endeavour. Tell them also, in my name, we hope that the good-will hitherto shown by German Government will not fail to cause it to make representation in this sense at London.

German Government said as follows:

England so easily, without any condition, would not consent to the new jurisdiction, without foreign judges after 17 years. It is possible that England, as Reichard confidentially told with regard to our jurisdiction, will make which can be really disagreeable to us. Therefore German government, having always good-will to Japan, will propose to England to consent to new Japanese tribunals, condition (being ?) reserved that the foreign judges remain in their function still after 17 years unless (in the ?) meantime a new special convention with Treaty Powers with regard to their abolition should be made. In this way German Government thinks to cause England to consent to new jurisdiction and to prevent from disadvantage possibly proceeding for Japan from England, condition which can be worse than the stipulation maintaining foreign judges. Therefore German Government confidentially asks if Japanese Government is ready that German Government can make this proposal at London.

From Inouye to Shinagawa.

Tell berchen and Reichard that Kawase is instructed to explain British Government that we cannot accept such condition as to maintain foreign judges after 17 years as before that period. (We must?) have full independence of jurisdictional Hoheitsrecht.

November 18th 1886.

From Shinagawa to Inouye.

Your telegram received. I can not understand your action. Why did you directly instruct to explain so (?) to British Government? I begged you in my telegram of 27 October to keep strictly confidential this affair also from Holleben and Pluny. It has been right way to answer me directly if you consent to that German proposal or not, but instead of that you officially instructed Kawase. Bechem told me that Holleben telegraphed him of your instruction to Kawase. Berchem begs you to consider well once more, begs you to demand not too much. If you do not consent to that German proposal, it is possible that our revision with regard to Japanese tribunal after 17 years can wholly miscarry. I beg you to consent this time to that German proposal. I have telegraphed Kawase

I request Berchem (to) support (us) in London and communicate to him my grateful acknowledgement for his assistance.

November 20, 1886.

From Inouye to Shinagawa.

The question of period after the expiration of the jurisdictional convention has been settled amicably today between myself and British Minister in Tokio to the following effect.

I have promised to him that the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs will, at the time of signature of the treaty, declare officially in the protocol attached to it that Japan will continue to employ some few judges of foreign nationality for a further term not exceeding five years in such superior courts as may seem desirable. Inform Berchem of this telegram and you may give him the copy.

From Inouye to Shinagawa.

After a conversation with English Minister (on) 16/11 in which he frankly communicated to me his government did not like to grant jurisdictional independence after 17 years and he showed me his report and telegram strongly urging acceptance of our wishes, I thought to assist him by instructing Kawase to inform Minister of Foreign Affairs that Japan must insist upon independence of jurisdiction after 17 years. Holleben was confidentially informed after I had seen English Minister and decided to instruct Kawase. Had I thought possible to meet wishes of British Government, I would have accepted with pleasure Berchem's offer. Kawase has today again been instructed to inform British Government that our political object in view are simply to obtain full independence of jurisdiction.

From Inouye to Kamatsubara.

Referring to your telegram of 15/3, has any action been taken by German Government with the other great Powers about judge question?

Confidentially inform German Government that we believe America will not consent if she is not to have five judges each with England.

May 4, 1887.

confidentially stated that they have received answers from other Great Powers. England insists and will not consent unless she has 6 and 4 for America. German Foreign Office has not yet acted with United States upon this question, but they will consult United States Minister in Germany and try to obtain consent. France offers no opposition provided that she has a right to choose the three French judges for herself and then nominated by Japanese Government and, besides, when foreign public prosecutors are to be appointed, one of them to be chosen from France.

Powers. In view of this, German Government recommends that the Japanese Minister in the United States should be instructed to urge on the United States Government to give their consent to four judges. German Foreign Office is now also trying, through the United States Minister, (to persuade?) the United States Government to consent.

From Inouye to Inouye.

In a private conference Count Berchem has confidentially informed me that in compliance with Japanese desire German Government proposed to European Powers the following distribution of thirty judges:

Ten to England and America, three to each of the five other Great Powers, the remaining five as well as five public prosecutors to be selected among Minor Powers. This plan has been agreed upon except by America which wants the same participation as any other powers, namely six judges. As some powers would likely decline to concede more than ten to England and America together, German Government now leaves decision to Japanese Government either (?) in case England would not be satisfied with five judges, to engage America to acquiesce in four. If America does not consent, the whole distribution would be now destroyed (and?) it would be very difficult to re-open the question of distribution with the European Powers.

Telegraph what course of action Japanese government intend to take. Keep this confidential.
