KYUSHU-OKINAWA SUMMIT 2000
Turning the Eyes of the World on Okinawa, Sending the Spirit of Okinawa to the World

The Okinawa G8 Summit Host Preparation Council will host a welcome reception for the Summit leaders visiting Okinawa for the Kyushu-Okinawa Summit Meeting.

From the days of old, Okinawa has been known to the world as the "land of courtesy and cordiality."

The people of Okinawa will warmly welcome the Summit leaders in this reception, which features Okinawa's unique culture and regal traditional performing arts that were developed in the age of the Ryukyu Kingdom through trade and interaction with various Asian cultures. The Summit theme song, "NEVER END," which reflects contemporary Okinawa will also be performed.
1. Welcome

Traditional Okinawan dress

The Summit leaders will be welcomed by two high school students dressed in the traditional attire of the Ryukyu Kingdom of old. The clothing is made of bingata fabric whose bright color reminds of Okinawa.

Welcomers: Yukino Matsuda and Takashi Toma, students of the Okinawa Prefectural Urasoe High School

Traditional Okinawan music

The reception features traditional Okinawan music performed with typical Okinawan instruments: the sashin (three-stringed plucked lute), koto (13-string zither), fue (Japanese-style flute), taiko (Japanese-style drums), and kokyu (three-stringed bowed lute). Ryukyuan music, with its unique melodies and vocalization techniques, covers a broad spectrum of expressions ranging from the pensive and melancholic to the up-tempo rhythms of celebration. Five pieces will be played, including "Kajade Fu-Bushi," a celebration song from the main island of Okinawa and the Yaeyama Islands.

Performers: Yaeyama Association of Traditional Folk Music
Okinawa Prefectural Association for the Preservation of the Nomura School of Traditional Music
Association for the Preservation of Traditional Okinawan Music for the Koto

2. Signing of Guest Book

Signing of the guest book by Summit leaders

3. Presentation of Cultural Works and Bouquets

To commemorate the Okinawa Summit, the "Students’ Cultural Exhibition" was held for students at the elementary, junior high, and high schools in Okinawa. Special classes were organized in the schools for the children to learn about the significance of the Summit and about the participating countries. The students also participated in the "G8 Cultural Festa," a Summit pre-event. The children then expressed their feelings and impressions in drawings, sculptures, and essays. Recipients of the "Summit Award for Outstanding Works of Art" will present the Summit leaders with their works of art. Recipients of the "Summit Award for Outstanding Essays" will present the Summit leaders with bouquets of flowers.

Speaker: Keiichi Inamine, Governor of Okinawa Prefecture and Chairman of the Okinawa G8 Summit Host Preparation Council
5. Toast

Toast for the success of the Summit Meeting joined by Summit leaders

Toastmaster: Kokichi Iramina, Chairman of the Okinawa Prefectural Assembly and Vice-Chairman of the Okinawa G8 Summit Host Preparation Council

Drink for the Toast

The toast will be made with awamori, the traditional liquor of Okinawa produced using distillation techniques which traveled over long distances in space and time to be introduced into these islands.

-- Awamori: The traditional liquor of Okinawa --

Awamori is a distilled liquor, like whiskey or brandy. It is said that the making of distilled drinks first began in 3000 B.C. in what is now Iraq. Historians tell us that this technology arrived in China in the 13th century and in Ryukyu in the 15th century. Traveling west, the first distilleries appeared in Ireland in the 12th century and in France in the 16th century, and traveling north, they sprouted up in Russia.

6. Welcoming Performance

"Tradition and the Future," a combination of music and Okinawa's traditional performing arts

The welcoming performance is produced by Mr. Tetsuya Komuro.

Producer: Tetsuya Komuro
Born in 1958 in Tokyo. Debuted in 1984 as a member of the music band, TM Network. In 1990, in addition to the activities of his own band, Mr. Komuro launched a highly successful career as a music producer and has produced a number of million-selling CDs featuring young artists. He was named UN Goodwill Ambassador in 1996 in recognition of his activities in anti-drug campaigns. In recent years, Mr. Komuro has been collaborating extensively with foreign artists, especially Asian musicians, and also others including French and American musicians.

Performing artist: Namie Amuro

Traditional Okinawan Dance Performances

Kashikaki
One of the classic "women's dances," Kashikaki is a well-loved program known for its gentleness and beauty. Kashikaki depicts the process of spinning, weaving, and sewing clothes, an activity performed in the past by women of all social ranks. The dance provides a beautiful portrayal of women's emotions of longing for loved ones as they engage in their work.

Nuchibana
The creation of this dance dates back about a century to the Meiji Era. The dancers are decked in garlands of red and white flowers expressive of the joyous spirit of young women in love. With its visual and musical charms, this is a colorful and festive dance.

Dancers: Association for the Preservation of Traditional Okinawan Dances
Musical Accompaniment: Association for the Preservation of the Afuso School of Traditional Okinawan Music

Theme Song of the Kyushu-Okinawa Summit
"NEVER END"
Mr. Komuro produced "NEVER END," the theme song of the Kyushu-Okinawa Summit. The theme song will be featured in this performance.
The theme song of the Kyushu-Okinawa Summit originated in an idea that the late Prime Minister Obuchi conveyed to the noted music producer, Tetsuya Komuro, in the following words: "I want you to write a song that will be loved by many people, a song that gives us a vision of harmony and interaction in the world in the 21st century." Having accepted this challenge, Mr. Komuro made frequent visits to Okinawa to experience the Ryukyuan folk music and traditional performing arts, and to interact with local musicians. The theme song, "NEVER END," was born out of these experiences. The title conveys the precious value of love, warmth, and consideration.

The orchestration includes the sanshin, the traditional three-stringed plucked lute of Okinawa. Mr. Sadao China, a noted musician residing in Okinawa, participated in the CD recording. The theme song is featured in the welcome reception and will be played by Mr. Komuro, Mr. China, and others and sung by Ms. Namie Amuro, an Okinawa-born singer, accompanied by local elementary school children and special guests from overseas. A portion of the proceeds from the CD sales will be contributed to UNICEF Japan.
The Ryuei style of karate has its roots in Chinese martial arts. This form features bold and aggressive actions reminiscent of a powerful black tiger.

This form is aimed at disciplining one's mind, breath, and body by harmonizing the rigid and the flexible. This is to be achieved by concentrating one's energy in the pit of the stomach and through proper posture and breathing. This form is used in practicing defensive and offensive techniques.

This form comes from the Ryuei style of karate and features a complete integration of defensive and offensive moves which are linked together and "spring forth as from a fountain." This form features attacks using the palm and a special breathing technique.

This style originates in Sokon Matsumura and is also known as the "Matsumura passai." Matsumura was a master of Shuri karate in the early modern period and trained many noted martial artists. Passai is one of the best-known forms and includes a broad range of moves, including komata sukui and saguri-te. This is a representative form of the Okinawa Shorin School.

This is one of the most basic forms of the Uechi style of karate. It requires a high level of training and focuses on the basic stance and the development of sharp perception and physical resilience. Sanchin is the starting point of the Uechi style.
